

Prince Rupert was built on fishing and it has lost nothing of those humble origins today. The past and present are irrevocably linked to fish, from the deep connection of the Ts'msyen people to the bounty of the North Pacific to the boom of the commercial fishing and canning industry in the early twentieth century. Because this is truly a fishing town, everything you need to catch some fish is right here. From tackle shops to outdoor clothing to boat repair, take your pick.
